NOTES:

Entries in square brackets [ ] – the closest equivalent, not an exact match. In the case of a breed name, the translation may be a historic, rather than currently recognised, breed.

Sandy - This is an agouti pattern colour. It differs from the colour Agouti in two ways:

- The intermediate orange band is much wider than normal;
- The orange colour throughout the coat is more intense.

As a result, the overall colour of the coat seems lighter, redder and less heavily ticked with black. The ticking is most reduced on the chest and flanks and is missing on the feet. The triangle at the nape of the neck is a rich reddish colour. The underside of the rabbit is a creamy white to straw, varying with the intensity of the main body colour, and having a blue base.

Light steel - Top colour appears a medium grey regularly ticked with black. The triangle at the nape of the neck is brownish. The ears have a broad black border. The upper surface of the tail is dark. The colour of the underside of the body is similar to the top colour but more even and dull. The intermediate brownish band is darker and a little narrower than the regular agouti pattern. The base colour is dark slate.
